UPDATE

Nothing to report from overnight, waiting on SITREPs from F Div.

No updates.

Sconner on social media re: member chat group. Concerns around safety and security of these members whose names are in social media on screenshots. ClG is looking into source of the leak, may have more on that later.

For the communications part. Need to address with the partners and public. The content does not represent the organization, nor should it overshadow the work of all our members. Acknowledge potential code element that will be assessed and followed up. GSB will work with corporate communications under Alison Whelan and Stephanie Sachse on messaging.

The immediate key point is the safety and security of members; they have been pulled off shift.

Reassessing postures and traffic diversion plans today, it will be a whole day, but by evening will be looking to start demobilizing or at least reassessing our sites.

Michele Paradis: thank you, good work done on all that.

Protests in Quebec City are aiming for between 11:00-17:00 today, but nothing significant is expected.

No overnight issues for O Div.

No updates.

Nothing new to report, continuing the same work as yesterday.

Assuming that Mitch is speaking for the Protective side, but from the assisting OPS side, things are still very fluid. Various options available to us today from that perspective; entered into a maintenance plan last night and deployed many personnel, expecting that to continue today. The results of today will inform where we target next. Want to manage expectations, today will set the tone. Assisting OPS is still a big lift.

Advised personnel yesterday that in 48 hours we would be in a better position to assess; will not be discussing demobilization just yet.

Situation is still very fluid, expecting certain elements to return today and try to destabilize our efforts. Need everyone to understand that.

Provided products to Andrea Howard to prepare the Commissioner for her discussion with Minister Mendicino; provided strategic assessment with definitions and explanations of behaviour at protests, ranging from Charter-protected, to criminal behaviour, to when it becomes a NS concern.

Also provided a product describing that these protests are the latest evolution in protest behaviour, which has been ongoing since lockdowns began in March 2020.

Summary on threat environment factors to be issued next week; factors that contribute to volatility, including the groups, the financing, and the possibility for insider threat.
Continuing to work on the officer safety side in open source.
Tracking the Ukraine situation; Russia and Belarus were supposed to finish military drills today, but have decided to extend them indefinitely.

Noting that the Olympic truce is not an official truce; it typically only covers the Games itself, not the Paralympics.

Will chat with Mike about resources today, but no other updates.

Tech Ops is running fine; drone activity is significantly down, only one over the area last night.

Upgraded the wifi, all seems to be working well.

Lots of interest in the item Mitch Monette spoke about with regard to the members.

Working to generate reports on the total number of individuals placed in CPIC in different categories; work in progress.

On the social media item - Noting that some members are receiving hateful emails or calls. Beefing up the posture and security at the CPC, just in case.

Another reminder: put out a recent message after the employee at Leikin took photos; may need to remind members again not to take personal photos when they are deployed. Some members have shared photos of themselves on the front line, it may seem innocent, but if it gets out the context can be taken to be negative. They do a great job on briefing members, but should emphasize not taking pictures while they are out there. Everything is moving at lightning speed, but noticed when we dealt with the social media issue last night, there was sporadic messaging with a lot of "Oops I should have included you." Need to ensure things are fanned out to all the right people so that we can all start working on it at the same time. Michele Paradis: good point, will have a discussion about distribution lists for various scenarios.

Regarding the first incident this morning, working on a sensitive SITREP process. Paul Brown should be on that; normal sensitive SITREP would be very close hold, but it should include me, someone from Comms, Paul Brown, and maybe someone else. Michele Paradis: will include that in the communique when it is sent out.

Picked up on the special media item late last night and this morning, so far have seen Rebel News pick it up. Lines are being crafted by corporate at NHQ.

From what I see there was nothing critical; the participants were in a group chat, but it could be spun out of context as well. Will be looking to have more bolstered lines and will share as soon as possible.

Mitch Monette: reminding people what is my span of control, about group or even individual posts that are going public. All of that in the context of operations is a no-no. Have already started dealing with that and with members at large.

Michele Paradis: if that can be hacked, the conversation can be too; we do not even know for sure if our member said that. Need to have more of a critical eye on it, and temper the response right now until we have more information. But we do need to speak to what we expect of our members.

Not foreseeing media availability today; Ministers will do shows, but no press conference.

Ops briefing is expected this afternoon, may be the last one.

Social media: considerable praise for work of the RCMP and others in past days.

Representative Harrow of New Mexico is proposing legislation to protect fleeing innocent Canadians being repressed by own government; also drew comparison to Venezuela.

We posted information on law enforcement actions under the Emergency Measures Order, will be looking to update these numbers; will not go into Whatsapp chat leaks but videos are going around of people being arrested and dropped off away from downtown, only to return at a later time.
